

Chaplaincy Community Workers

at the University of Roehampton,
London

We are looking for two Chaplaincy Community Workers to support, through proactive and creative community work on campus and in the local area, the mission and aims of the multi-faith chaplaincy team at Roehampton and of two of its colleges.

The Chaplaincy Community Workers will support the Methodist and Roman Catholic Chaplains in their chaplaincy work and particularly as they lead a new ecumenical community house of students. The CCWs will live in the community house, helping to shape it and support its common life. They will also support the wider activities of the Methodist and Roman Catholic chapels on campus and the college communities in which those chapels sit.

We anticipate this being an exciting opportunity for those wishing to discern in a practical way their own vocation within the Christian faith, exploring possible future ministries within the context of a modern university with a diverse and lively student body.
